FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

Warner Robins Air Materiel Area
By BRIG. GEN. R. V. IGNICO, USAF
Commanding General, WRAMA, and Robins
Air Force Base, Georgia

THE winged shadows of America's first line security are cast heavily over middle Georgia in these early months of 1950, as the role of this 6,400-acre Air Force installation figures more and more in defense measures being taken by the nation's civilian and military leaders.

The Robins Air Force Base, originally carved out of the swamplands and occasional cornfields which covered the countryside until 1942, played a dramatic role in the ultimate victory in World War II. Now, unlike so many other tremendous contemporary bases on which the barracks are rotting, unpainted, uncared for, and with doors and windows unhinged and sightless, it continues with an ever increasing pulsation of life, while the sound of every type plane, from sassy jets to the commanding basso of the B-36, is not strange to the maneuverings of the control tower.

The principal business of Robins Air Force Base is the hub for the vast Warner Robins Air Materiel Area, which sees to the maintenance and supply requirements of all Air Force establishments in the five states of Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, and Florida. Besides being centrally located to the task before it, the headquarters near Macon is named for one of the officers in the early Air Force, the late General Augustine Warner Robins, himself a native of Virginia and whose home state is within WRAMA's bailiwick.

It was in the very early '20s that the then Major A. W. Robins convened a board of officers which established the system still in use in the Air Force for cataloging of items. This put reins on some 725,000 different bits and pieces of supplies necessary to keep an Air Force running and in repair, stood the test of the complex supply lines of World War II, and is still in use today.

Robins Air Force Base calls for a "three-hatted administrator," being commander of the Base, the Warner Robins Air Materiel Area, and the figurative landlord to several tenant Air Force organizations of differing missions and sizes, which make Robins one of the most cosmopolitan in the world today. More than 7,500 military and civilian personnel employ their widely varied talents at Robins.

The base itself amounts to nearly ten full sections of land, roughly corresponding in area to the city of Macon itself, and with a similar multi-million-dollar property and equipment evaluation. The detailed intricacy of the operation is illus-

New Plan for USAF
Temp. Promotions

Following disclosure of 1950 plans for permanent promotions, reported in the 25 Feb. issue of THE JOURNAL, the Air Force yesterday, 24 March, announced a new comprehensive plan for temporary promotions to the grade of captain through colonel for Regular and Reserve officers, including WAFs, Medical Service officers and Chaplains.

The program is designed to fill vacancies as they occur, and promotions will be effected on a monthly basis, with the first temporary advancements to be made under the new plan in June or July.

The names of officers selected for advancement by boards convened either at USAF Headquarters or by major commands will be placed on a list of "recommended personnel" from which the promotions will be made.

All selections for promotion to the temporary grades of Colonel and Lieutenant Colonel will be made by Central Selection Boards appointed by the Secretary of the Air Force and will be convened at USAF Headquarters.

Initial selections for promotion to the temporary grades of Major and Captain, including WAFs but excluding Medical Service officers and Chaplains, will be made by Selection Boards appointed by the commanding generals of the Air Force's major commands.

Officers who are not assigned to one of the Major Air Force Commands, Medical Service Officers, and Chaplains who are eligible for temporary promotion to Major or Captain, will be considered by a Selection Board at USAF Headquarters.

There will be two lists of eligible officers for each promotion category: a list of officers meeting the primary zone of consideration, and a second list of a limited number of officers who meet the secondary zone of consideration and who are recommended for consideration for promotion.

In all instances, the number of officers considered under the requirements listed for the secondary zones will not exceed ten per cent of the number of eligible officers in any command meeting the requirements of the primary zones.

Promotions will be made in the order of permanent seniority for Regular and in the order of temporary seniority for

Army Colonel Promotions

The Army this week announced the names of five chaplains promoted to the permanent grade of colonel.

They are Edward J. DeMars, Charles P. Malumphy, John T. Kilcoyne, William B. Estes and Frank A. Tobey.

At the same time, Army officials indicated that the list of officers selected for permanent promotion to the rank of colonel on the Army Promotion List will be released early next month. This will be followed by announcement of officers selected for temporary promotion to the rank of colonel.

Disability Retirements

Developments this week indicated that the first of two Executive Orders covering procedure for payment of increased compensation to military personnel retired for physical disability would be issued very soon, possibly next week.

The other proposed Executive Order designating the agency responsible for payment, hospitalization and re-examination of other members of the Services retired for disability is still held up because of inability to reconcile the different viewpoints of the Department of Defense, the Bureau of the Budget, and the Veterans' Administration.

Consideration is now being given to the issuance of an ad interim Executive Order, which, in effect, would continue temporarily the present procedure, under which the Services would remain responsible for the payment of Regulars retired for disability, and the Veterans' Administration would pay non-Regular personnel in this category. Hospitalization would be provided by the Services, as at present. Such an ad interim order was advocated in an editorial in THE JOURNAL as a temporary solution to the current impasse.

After months of inaction the Services have begun to act on cases of non-Regulars, hospitalized prior to 1 Oct. and who are now awaiting retirement for disability. Many in this category have been held on active duty long after they were approved for retirement, awaiting issuance of the Executive Order specifying the agency to make payment.

It has now been determined that non-Regulars who were hospital patients prior to 1 Oct. 1949, and who, after qualifying for retirement, elected to receive compensation under laws in effect prior to that date, could be certified to the Vet-

Defense Funds Cut
By House Committee

The House of Representatives will begin consideration next week of a single-package appropriations bill which includes $12,825,342,300 for defense during fiscal year 1951.

This is a reduction in defense funds of $203 million from the $13 billion contained in the President's budget estimates and is a cut of $230 million from 1950 military appropriations.

The accompanying chart compares recommendations of the House Appropriations Committee with current appropriations and Presidential estimates.

The debate on the House floor follows release this week of the House Appropriations Committee report on the General Appropriation Bill, the military section of which is highlighted by severe criticism of the President for withholding funds voted last year for expansion of the Air Force to 58 groups. The report envisages a smaller Army, but one better trained and ready for instant deployment, and reflects curtailed Navy operations for the forthcoming fiscal year.

The House Committee recommends that the military strength of the Armed Forces for the next fiscal year be 1,507,000, with 630,000 for the Army, 461,000 for the Navy and Marine Corps and 416,000 for the Air Force.

The Department of Defense, in its latest compilation of strength, has revealed that at the beginning of this month the Armed Forces had 1,490,300 men and women as follows: Army, 607,800; Navy, 388,400; Marine Corps, 79,500; and Air Force, 414,600.

In this regard, the House Committee notes in reporting the Appropriations Bill that the current strength of the Armed Forces is well below the 1,616,544 for which funds were appropriated.

Summarizing its conclusions on Army appropriations for the forthcoming fiscal year, the Appropriations subcommittee observes that 32 per cent of Army strength will be engaged in occupation duty and declares that "their presence in the areas which were former enemy countries provides a service of unparalleled value in the maintenance of peace."

Concerning reduced Army strength, the House group says that "while the Army will not be so large in numbers . . . it is in a better state of training than ever before in peacetime and for that reason more able to meet any assignment." It is pointed out, however, that "the smaller the force the more easily it may be trained to a state of high efficiency, and while more effective at the initial requirement if an emergency occurs, it may not be able to sustain a counteroffensive as could a larger force."

Emphasis has been placed, the report continues, on a relatively small but effective Army "as a mobile striking force well trained and equipped with modern weapons and ready for immediate deployment."

For the Navy and Marine Corps, the appropriations report relates that military personnel in fiscal year 1951 will be

Detroit News—"The report . . . which . . . branded the removal of Admiral Louis Denfeld by his superiors as a 'reprisal' for his 'frank and honest' criticism of national defense planning will contribute absolutely nothing to the future integrity of our security establishment. For if the committee is right . . . then Navy Secretary Matthews and Defense Secretary Johnson were wrong in disciplining Denfeld—but are being permitted to get away with it."

Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal—"Congress should act to assure . . . 'adequate consideration' to the views of all our top military thinkers, and insure them against such abrupt and properly described 'reprisals' as meted out to Admiral Denfeld when his congressionally-sought testimony displeased his Pentagon superiors."

Raleigh, N. C., News & Observer—"It is still a little hard to understand how Congress is going to get any official to carry out its instructions to unify the armed services if Congress is going to line up with admirals who are opposing the decision of Congress against officials who are trying to carry that decision out."

Boston, Christian Science Monitor—"The call for criminal penalties had a political tinge. . . . It was backed by 10 Republicans and but one Democrat."

Furthermore, the navy secretary's motives should be given some benefit of doubt. . . . It is probable that Secretary Matthews did feel he must have an aide whose views did not conflict too sharply with his own. But we believe the committee majority should have taken no lesser action than it did."

Durham, N. C., Herald—"Whether Captain Crommelin is wise to disobey the orders of his superiors on this matter is for him to decide, but this newspaper believes that the Defense Department is acting improperly in trying to gag him. . . . Naval officers should be allowed to express their opinions as freely as anyone else."

erans' Administration for retirement payment. Approximately 50 officers in this classification were so certified this week, and it is probable that a large number of other cases will be disposed of in this manner within the next week.

Under the Career Compensation Act the period in which military personnel in hospitals as patients prior to last October may choose the law under which to receive retirement pay will expire on 1 April. However, a bill has been introduced in Congress extending the time limit to 1 Jan. 1951. In all probability this bill will be passed promptly.

The Executive order affecting retired pay which is almost ready for approval is the one called for under Section 411 of the Career Compensation Act. This section authorizes those previously retired for physical disability to choose between continuing to receive the compensation they were getting prior to last October, or to be paid under the schedules and conditions prescribed by the new Act. However, Presidential regulations are necessary to put this section in force. These regulations have been prepared and agreed to by the interested Services. They are now being considered by the Department of Justice.

As soon as the Executive Order is received putting these new regulations in effect they will be distributed to retired personnel affected, in order that they may have the opportunity to select the law under which they wish to be paid. All persons retired for physical disability in line of duty prior to 1 Oct. receive 75 per cent of their active duty pay. Under the new law disability retired pay is based on degree of incapacity and length of service. Hence in some cases it might be more advantageous for the individual to continue to be paid under the old law. An important factor is the exemption from Federal income tax of that portion of retired pay based on percentage of disability.

In order to determine the percentage of disability under standards prescribed by the new law it is necessary for boards of medical officers to examine the retirement papers and hospital clinical records in each case. With some 40,000 retired for disability the Army has the heaviest task of any of the Services in reviewing these cases. Some 15,000 retired members of the Army have applied to have their cases reviewed and medical boards have completed the examination of the records of more than 5,000.

Following the promulgation of appropriate regulations each officer whose case has been processed will be advised of the extent of the disability found to exist at the time of retirement, together with the compensation he would receive under the new law and the amount exempt from income tax. This will make it possible for the individual to determine readily under which law he would benefit most. If he decides to be paid under the new law any increase will be retroactive to 1 Oct.

The Services feel that it will be necessary to await the second Executive Order, prescribing the agency responsible for payments, hospitalization and re-examination, before paying increased compensation to those previously retired for disability. However, the second Executive Order will be necessary for the payment of non-Regulars retired under the new law for disability.

Under present procedure payment of Regulars retired for disability is made by the Services and of non-Regulars by the Veterans' Administration. The Career Compensation Act extends to retired non-

Regulars hospitalization benefits previously provided only for Regulars by the Army and Air Force. The Navy has provided medical attention for retired personnel in all categories. The latest proposal of the Services is that disability payments be made by the Veterans' Administration, with hospitalization made the responsibility of the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

However, the Department of Defense is said to be hesitant about assuming continued responsibility for hospitalization, particularly in view of the recent decision to curtail medical facilities. The cut-back in Veterans' Administration hospitals has caused that agency to oppose taking on further responsibilities for medical care.

The Bureau of the Budget favors assigning responsibility for payment, hospitalization and re-examination to the Defense Department. This is opposed by military authorities on the ground that expenditures for such purposes are not logically chargeable to funds for the National Defense. One compromise put forward as a possible solution is that pay and hospitalization of those retired for disability be charged to the civil functions of the Military Establishment.

Meantime, a recent order of the Surgeon General of the Army directs that medical and dental facilities, where available, be extended to non-Regular as well as Regular retired personnel. The order follows:

"Pending the revision of AR 40-505, 40-510, 40-590, and pursuant to authority contained in Section 402, Title IV, Career Compensation Act of 1949, Public Law 351, 81st Congress, promulgated in Joint Army-Air Force Bulletin No. 30, dated 21 Oct. 1949, all members of the Reserve components, including AUS personnel without component, as stated in Section 102 (b), Title I of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, heretofore or hereafter retired or granted retirement pay for physical disability, shall be entitled to the following under the same conditions as presently authorized for retired members of the Regular services:

"a. Hospitalization in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 6a, AR 40-590.

"b. Medical attendance in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 2b (2), AR 40-505.

"c. Dental attendance in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 2, AR 40-510."

Sec. Johnson's Year in Office

Next Tuesday, 28 March, will mark the first anniversary of Louis Johnson's taking office as Secretary of Defense.

The stormy first year of the vigorous Defense Secretary has been highlighted by the angry resignation of Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan, the congressional airing of the Navy-Air Force controversy over the B-36 long-range bomber and the concept of strategic bombing, the removal and subsequent retirement of Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations; the disciplining of Capt. John Crommelin, an outspoken Navy critic of defense policies, and a quarrel with Congress over the size of the Air Force.

Despite the difficulties he has encountered, Secretary Johnson indicates that he is thoroughly enjoying the duties of his office. He denies occasional rumors that he plans to resign. Many feel that he has made genuine progress in the unification of the Armed Forces, that under his direction much waste and duplication have been eliminated, and that National Defense has been strengthened.

During his first year in office Mr. Johnson has completely reorganized the Department of Defense and instituted changes of policy of far-reaching importance. The Congress passed a new Unification Act, greatly increasing the authority of the Secretary of Defense over subordinate military departments as had been recommended by the late Secretary Forrestal and the Hoover Commission. The appointment of Gen. Omar N. Bradley as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff under the new law was received with widespread approval.

Aside from the much publicized inter-Service controversies and occasional disputes with Congress, an outstanding characteristic of Mr. Johnson's administration has been the imposition of rigid economy to convert "fat to muscle." The cost of operating the Military Establishment has been reduced from the budget estimate of $14.2 billion for the current fiscal year, to $13 billion estimated for the fiscal year 1951.

In addition to reductions in amounts requested from Congress the Department has been able to absorb the cost of various new items, such as pay raises for military and civilian personnel, which would normally have to be met through deficiency appropriations.

The economies in the Defense Department were effected largely through reductions in military and civilian personnel, and through closing a number of military installations.

When Mr. Johnson took office a year ago the overall strength of the Armed Forces was 1,649,800. The strength on 28 Feb. 1950, eleven months later, was 1,490,300, a loss of 159,500. The Army declined from 692,400 to 607,800, a loss of 84,600; the Navy from 450,300 to 388,400, a drop of 61,900; the Marine Corps from 87,900 to 79,500, a loss of 8,400, and the Air Force from 419,200 to 414,600, a decline of 4,600.

The Secretary holds that while there has been a substantial decline in numerical strength there has been an overall qualitative improvement. He points to the fact that combat efficiency of all Services has been strengthened by taking men away from desk jobs and related tasks and placing them in fighting units. There has been a material increase in the reenlistment rate, thus eliminating much of the recruit training; one-year enlistments have been abolished, thereby reducing the heavy annual turnover.

The Defense Department has reduced its civilian employees by 163,000 during the past year. This was accomplished largely by closing installations, particularly shore establishments of the Navy. Further reductions in civilian employees are in prospect, though not on such a large scale as those recently effected.

On 30 June 1949 the Navy was operating 261 combat ships, including one battleship and 19 aircraft carriers, of which 8 were large carriers. Under the proposed defense program for next year the Fleet will be cut to 239 combat ships, including one battleship on limited service, and 15 carriers, 7 of which are of the large type.

Nine months ago the Navy and Marine Corps were operating 7,783 planes of all types. The estimates for next year leave these Services with only 6,233 aircraft. However, many of the Navy and Marine planes now in service are new and more efficient than those in use last June.

The Air Force on 1 Jan. 1949 was operating 60 Air Groups, including one Provisional Group, and had an overall plane strength of 9,900 in service. On the first of this year there were 48 Air Groups and 13 separate squadrons, with a total of 8,800 planes in service. The reduction from 60 Groups to 48 is not as drastic as it would appear, since the Groups have been reorganized and some contain more planes than heretofore. The decline in the number of planes is partially offset by improved performance of new types.

Both the Navy and Air Force have large numbers of vessels and planes inactivated, which could be put back in commission in an emergency.

Mr. Johnson's economy decisions have encountered a great deal of resistance in the Services, in Congress and in the press. Advocates of a stronger Navy and of a stronger Air Force have been particularly outspoken in their criticism.

An early ruling of Mr. Johnson halted construction of the proposed 65,000-ton flush-deck carrier, a major project of the Navy. This vessel had been authorized by the Congress and actual construction work had started.

Acting on the recommendation of two members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, with the Navy member dissenting, Mr. Johnson, with the approval of the President, stopped the work. This led to the prompt resignation of Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan, who indignantly protested that he had not been consulted before final action was taken.

Smarting under the cancellation of their high-priority project, several high-ranking Navy officers made an outspoken attack on certain defense policies. They were particularly incensed over the allocation of large sums for the procurement of quantities of heavy B-36 long-range bombers for the Air Force, and assailed the basic concept of strategic bombing. The implication was that the Navy was being sacrificed to build up an Air Force of doubtful value.

The controversy began with an anonymous communication which imputed questionable motives to Defense Secretary Johnson and Air Secretary W. Stuart Symington. The document was traced to Cedric Worth, a civilian assistant in the Navy Department, who readily admitted that there was no basis for the serious allegations contained in the letter. He was relieved from Government service.

Subsequently the attack was taken up by Capt. John Crommelin, a Navy officer then on duty in the Department of Defense, and later by several officers of flag rank. The resultant Congressional inquiry completely cleared Mr. Johnson and Mr. Symington of any wrongdoing, but developed considerable sympathy for the Navy point of view. Capt. Crommelin continued his public criticism and was recently furloughed at half pay as a disciplinary measure.

During the investigation Admiral Louis Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations, sided with those who were critical of Defense Department policies, and was removed from office by the President, at the request of Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews. This raised a storm of protest and the House Armed Services Committee regarded the ouster as a reprisal for the Admiral's testimony before the committee, despite Mr. Matthews' insistence that the change had been decided upon prior to the Congressional hearings.

Admiral Denfeld, who retired from the Navy, was succeeded by Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, who has achieved a notable record of accomplishment during the few months that he has been in office.

Many members of Congress have expressed concern and resentment over the failure of the Department of Defense to make material progress in the expansion of the Air Force toward the 70-Group goal repeatedly recommended as the minimum force essential to National Security. Funds and contract authorizations were made available in the current Appropriations Act as a step toward this expansion. However, the funds were impounded by the President, and the Air Force procurement program was not enlarged.

Some Congressional critics were also displeased with Mr. Johnson's action in closing various military installations, and particularly with a recent order closing

Housing Speed-Up Seen

Formulation by the Department of Defense of uniform procedures for the Army, Navy, and Air Force in the implementation of the Wherry Act, which provides Government mortgage insurance for Service family housing units, will accelerate construction of quarters in the United States, it was indicated late this week.

Chairman Bertram Giesecke of the Department of Defense Housing Commission is slated to appear Monday, 27 March, before the House Armed Services Committee to present a complete report on housing progress under the Wherry Act.

It is recalled that Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson ordered the Services on 16 Dec. to refrain from accepting any new proposals for construction of housing units under the Wherry Act until uniform procedures were adopted.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the Armed Services Committee of the House and Senator Millard Tydings (D-Md.), who heads the Senate Armed Services Committee, have been disturbed by delays in implementation of the housing legislation. Chairman Vinson has promised a full inquiry into this matter, while Senator Tydings named a special housing subcommittee, headed by Senator Lyndon Johnson (D-Tex.) to investigate the entire problem of Service housing.

In an appearance before the House committee late last week, Mr. Giesecke promised to return on 27 March with a detailed statement concerning the adoption of the new procedure and outline at that time plans for expansion of the housing program under the Wherry Act.

Chairman Vinson has insisted that the Services make as wide a use of this legislation as possible in order to keep appropriations for Service housing in public works bills, at a minimum to permit greater funds for procurement of equipment.

Before Secretary Johnson's stop-order went into effect in mid-December, the Services already had processed 81 Wherry Act projects to provide approximately 32,000 housing units. The Air Force had 42 projects; the Army, 39, and the Navy, 2. A total of 5,000 units were reported to be under construction.

When Mr. Giesecke appears before the House committee, in addition to reporting on the Wherry Act, he is expected to reveal plans for a long-range Armed Forces housing program.

Meantime, THE JOURNAL, continuing a policy of keeping personnel informed as to Service housing progress, has obtained data concerning the following projects:

Ft. Bliss, Tex.—First concrete has been poured for the Van Horne project of 800 units to cost $7,500,000, expected to house a community of 4,000 people. Simultaneously, it is announced that the area containing the recently completed 54-unit housing project on the southeast part of the fort has been named "George Moore Park" in honor of the late Maj. Gen. George F. Moore, hero of Corregidor.

Schenectady, N. Y.—Construction of 50 units at the General Depot here has been approved by the Secretary of the Army. The project will cover approximately 70 acres and will cost $482,400. Rents will range from $65 to $75 a month for two-bedroom units and from $85 to $105 for three-bedroom quarters.

Eglin AFB, Fla.—Needs and recommendations in regard to increased housing at this key Air Force installation were discussed at a recent meeting attended by Col. M. C. Woodbury, base commander, and Mr. Russell Tinney, Florida State Housing Administration, and Mr. Richard Stanley, State Appraiser for the FHA.

Carswell AFB, Tex.—A project to provide housing for 136 families at a cost of $1,500,000 is reported progressing satisfactorily—at one time being 72 days ahead of schedule.

Marbo, Guam.—Negotiations are underway to obtain vacated Marine Corps houses at Camp Witek for use by Marbo personnel. Approximately 200 quonset-type quarters are involved. Use of the facilities may lessen by 10 or 11 months the waiting period now in effect for the transportation of dependents to Guam.

Ft. Benning, Ga.—Sixteen non-commissioned officers and their families this month moved into new apartments in the $900,000 housing project near the Student Training regiment area.

America "Disarmed"

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, in an address this week at Columbia University, said that "America has already disarmed to the extent—in some directions even beyond the extent—that I, with deep concern for her present safety, could possibly advise, until we have certain knowledge that all nations are doing likewise."

Until true peace is attained, General Eisenhower declared, weakness in the face of Soviet strength is "well-nigh as criminal as war itself."

Symington to AEC

With the appointment this week of Mr. Thomas E. Murray, of New York, to membership on the Atomic Energy Commission, speculation grew as to the likelihood of the President designating Secretary of the Air Force Symington as chairman of the AEC. Added weight was given the rumor by the fact that although White House spokesman Ross would not confirm it neither did he deny it.

It was also speculated that Mr. Thomas K. Finletter would succeed Symington as Secretary of the Air Force. Mr. Finletter was author of "Survival in the Air Age," in which the Presidential Commission he headed recommended early attainment of the 70-group program.

Navy Board Membership

Two Navy selection boards will be convened on Monday, 27 March, to select Supply Corps and Civil Engineer Corps officers for temporary promotion to lieutenant and lieutenant commander.

The Navy also announced the names of members of three Staff Corps selection boards convened on 14 March.

Joseph L. Schwartz. Other members are: Captains George A. Alden, John L. Frazer, Roger D. Mackey, James F. Hayes, John B. Brady and John P. Wood.

Members of the Dental Corps board are Captains Robert P. Irons, president, Arthur R. Logan, Raymond A. Lowry, Clifford C. DeFord, Curtiss W. Schantz, Thaddeus V. Joseph, and Max A. Moon. The board will select 23 officers for temporary promotion to the grade of lieutenant.

Headed by Rear Adm. Thornton C. Miller, the Chaplains Corps board includes Captains Herbert Dumstrey, Joseph H. Brooks, Charles A. Dittmar, Luther F. Gerhart, and Vincent J. Gorski. The board will pick 15 officers for temporary promotion to lieutenant.

Membership of the two new boards was not announced.

Budget Report and the Army

Following are excerpts from the report of the House Appropriations Committee on the Army budget for fiscal year 1951.

Defense Pact

"The decision of the Government to support western Europe compels the committee to consider the effectiveness of our military forces until the military effectiveness of those Nations now being aided through the military assistance program can be brought up to an effective and deterring force. With these potentials, such as a well trained and equipped Army, although not large in numbers, and the strength that European nations can give within a short period of time this National must still accept a calculated risk measured by a comparison of our capabilities at any given time to the capabilities of the potential enemy. Here again, the effectiveness of the Army which cannot have all the funds it would like to have depends upon a delicate balance between its trained personnel and the modern equipment which can be supplied. The committee through its action based upon the best evidence it could secure has endeavored to provide that balance."

Engineer Service

"The committee was impressed with the presentation made by the Engineer Corps and particularly impressed with the efforts that have been made to rebuild material that has been returned from overseas so that it may be utilized in replacing old and worn-out material and in equipping the Army. Testimony adduced seems conclusive on the point that if funds are provided, in addition to the $16,167,306 requested for 'Repair and maintenance of engineer equipment,' to the extent of $4,500,000 that more items could be made usable and thereby save on the cost of new procurement, particularly in the year succeeding fiscal year 1951. In considering the reductions that might be effected this matter was thoroughly discussed and it is the purpose of the committee that within the funds appropriated for this item there will be allocated for use under project 410 'Repair and maintenance of engineer equipment' the sum of $20,667,306, which is the amount requested for this project plus $4,500,000 to be taken from other projects within this service. Because of this action it will be expected that requirements under this project will show a reduction in the funds requested for fiscal year 1952."

Ordnance Department

"To carry out its program during fiscal year 1951 will require the operation of 88 ordnance establishments. Two establishments are scheduled for deactivation during the fiscal years 1950 and 1951, and the submarine mine depot will be transferred to the Department of the Navy."

"The estimated cost of the procurement program of the Ordnance Department is $246,296,705, which will cover the procurement of such items as antiaircraft fire-control systems for the protection of troops, major installations, and cities against high- and fast-flying airplanes; antiaircraft artillery commonly referred to as the skysweeper; tanks, trucks, and tactical motor vehicles."

The maintenance and operations program for the fiscal year 1951 covers the preservation of ordnance materiel and ammunition, the maintenance of Army aircraft and the procurement of Army training aids, the rebuild of a special reserve of materiel for issue to the civilian components of the Army. Under the program for preservation of ordnance materiel the Army is charged with the maintenance and preservation of approximately

UNITED STATES ARMY

$8,000,000,000 worth (at acquisition cost) of ordnance materiel, including artillery, small arms, tanks, and trucks which were procured during World War II and must be maintained to support present troops strength and for mobilization of the Army."

"Based upon the urgent need for economy and the belief that prices are on a downward trend, the committee recommends a reduction in budget estimates of $36,360,000, leaving a balance of $600,000,000 recommended for appropriation."

National Guard

"The committee has recommended for approval the budget request of $210,700,000, plus $1,700,000, totaling $212,400,000 for the Army National Guard. This amount provides for an Army National Guard of 4,785 units federally recognized, with an additional 76 authorized to be recognized. The recruiting campaign conducted last fall was highly successful. In fact, so much so that the quotas established were oversubscribed. This clearly indicates to the committee the growing interest of the general public in our National Guard, as well as definite foresight and sound planning on the part of those responsible for the operation of a successful program."

"The importance of a well-trained, modern National Guard cannot be overemphasized."

Organized Reserve

"The budget request of $110,000,000, plus $5,000,000 for the Organized Reserves of the Army, is recommended by the committee. These funds were requested upon a justification that there would be in the Organized Reserve during fiscal year 1951 an estimated number of 73,500 officers and 181,500 enlisted men. The committee was advised that the ceiling of 73,500 officers was established by the Bureau of the Budget with the expectation of a 70-percent attendance throughout the year. Other information presented to the committee during the course of the hearings indicated that a considerably greater number of officer personnel was desirable and that the Army had requested a budget to support 124,000. It now appears that as a result of a meeting between the Department of the Army and the Bureau of the Budget, held subsequent to the development of the facts above mentioned, that the Bureau of the Budget has made reasonable assurance that a transfer of funds to pay officers up to a 100-percent attendance record will be honored. In view of these facts the committee has recommended an increase of $5,000,000 above the budget request."

QMC Purchase Policy

Future purchasing programs of the Quartermaster Corps for supplies other than food will be conducted so as to provide a minimum of 90 days between award of a contract and initial delivery of materials supplied by contractors. Exceptions to this policy may be made in connection with purchases for special programs and in instances where requirements or other circumstances necessitate earlier delivery.

Army Mutual Aid

The Army Mutual Aid Association received 21 applications for membership during the past week, and paid the insurance benefits on account of the deaths of Col. Harold J. Guernsey, USA-Ret., and Maj. Lewis C. Covington, USA-Ret.

Army Warrant Officers

Army officials disclosed this week that plans have been formulated for making additional warrant officer appointments prior to 30 June 1951. The appointments, it was reported, will be made from three sources.

A portion of the requirements in existing warrant classifications will be made by temporary appointments being given to enlisted men in pay grade E-7, whose qualifying scores on the 1948 examinations were below the scores of those previously selected for warrant appointments.

Remaining requirements will be filled by temporary appointments on the basis of competitive examinations.

The third category will include appointments in warrant classifications not yet introduced and will be made after new competitive examinations are given.

Laetare Medal to Gen. Collins

Winner for 1950 of the Laetare Medal, the oldest American Catholic medal, is General Joseph Lawton Collins, Chief of Staff of the United States Army. The medal is presented annually by the University of Notre Dame to an outstanding American Catholic layman.

The announcement was made by Rev. John J. Cavanaugh, C.S.C., President of Notre Dame. General Collins is the 68th winner of the award, announced annually since 1883 on Laetare Sunday. The medal was founded by Rev. Edward F. Sorin, C.S.C., founder of Notre Dame. Winner in 1949 was the motion picture actress, Irene Dunne.

Father Cavanaugh, in making public the award to General Collins, said:

"General Collins has had a distinguished career as a soldier, having been decorated for gallantry in both World Wars. His genius during the crisis of wartime, moreover, is equalled by his steadfast efforts in behalf of peace in the world today. General Collins, throughout his lengthy service with the United States government, has remained a shining example of the moral leadership which is one of the vital needs of the world."

Selection of General Collins for the 1950 Laetare Medal marks the fifth leading military figure to be so honored. General John Newton was awarded the medal in 1886, General William R. Rosecrans in 1896, Admiral William S. Benson in 1917, and General Hugh A. Drum in 1940.

Cut Army Promotions

Budget limitations again have hit Army enlisted promotions with disclosure this week that in addition to the suspension already existing for non-career field promotions to the first three pay grades, no non-career field promotions to the rank of corporal, E-4, are to be made.

The new Army directive also stipulates increased time in grade and time in service eligibility requirements for all promotions to private first class and corporal.

Not suspended, however, are those career field promotions to and within the upper four non-commissioned officer grades obtained by competitive promotion examinations.

The following is the pertinent explanation of the enlisted promotion restrictions issued by G-1 officials this week:

As a part of its program to keep its enlisted grade strength within its budget grade limitations, on 16 Sept. 1949 the Army first suspended its upper three grade non-career field promotions without examination in order to utilize its available budget resources for promotions by examination. This first suspension did not affect career promotions based on regular promotion examinations for those enlisted personnel within the career fields which were then introduced. However, since all enlisted personnel were not then under introduced career fields and thus able to take advantage of the continuing upper three grade promotional opportunity offered therein, the Army proceeded to finalize its schedule for putting the balance of its 31 career fields into effect as quickly as possible. It has expedited this program for introducing the balance of its 31 career fields, establishing 31 Aug. 1950 as the target date for sending the last career field Introductory Special Regulation to the printer. This speed-up action will make available within the relatively near future to all enlisted personnel, including those whose promotions have been hitherto suspended, such career promotional opportunity as the budget permits.

As part of its program to keep its grade strength within budget grade limitations, the Army has also set grade E-4 as the top grade which can be obtained on enlistment by prior service men returning to service more than 90 days after discharge. It has also placed a grade E-4 ceiling upon the grades allowed former officers and warrant officers applying for enlistment who are not entitled by statute or actual Army commitments to a higher grade.

At the same time, however, the Army announced its "skip" promotional policy under which former officers, warrant officers, or non-commissioned officers, would be given an opportunity to apply for promotion examinations for MOS in their career field up to and including the highest enlisted grade formerly held or grade E-7 for former warrant officers or officers. Thus, individuals in these categories—men who have once held higher rank whether enlisted, warrant, or commissioned, will be able to "skip grades" in applying for promotion examinations not otherwise permitted. Moreover, for this same category of individuals the regular time in grade requirements otherwise governing eligibility for promotion examinations will also be lifted. They will be made eligible to apply for the first scheduled examinations in their career field without regard for the normal time in grade otherwise required, provided they meet certain overall time in service requirements to be established.

Continued comparison of projected actual grade strength against budget grade limitations under this program indicates the necessity for slowing down promotions to grade E-4 (Corporal) and to grade E-3 (Private First Class). Promotions to these grades had not been affected by the 16th September 1949 suspension. It has therefore been necessary now to take the further steps of suspending grade E-4 for non-career field promotions without examination and of lengthening the time in grade and time in service requirements for all grade E-3 and grade E-4 promotions. This suspension of grade E-4 promotions will be lifted at the first opportunity and the extended time in grade and time in service requirements returned to their original periods as soon as possible. The speed-up in the introduction of all career fields will also within the relatively near future give to those individuals, not now under career fields and consequently, with their non-career field promotions suspended, regular career promotional opportunity to obtain grade E-4 under the competitive career promotion examinations as are scheduled for their career field.

To keep related directives in line with the suspension of grade E-4 promotions, WCL 42571, 15 March 1950 (Unrestricted) changes the wording of par. 8a(3)(c), SR 615-105-1, the regulation governing enlistments. Paragraph 8a(3) prohibits the reenlistment of individuals, initially acquiring dependents after 1 May 1949, who do not hold at discharge grade E-4 (Corporal) or have been recommended for this grade. The new change in this regulation emphasizes that during the period of suspension of promotions individuals in this category may still be reenlisted if they hold grade E-3 (Private First Class) on discharge and also hold a written recommendation from their company commander and an endorsement from their regimental commander or similar promotion authority indicating that they would have been promoted to grade E-4 except for the fact that their non-career field promotion without examination had been suspended. A clarification in wording seemed necessary since the Army has now suspended the regular means for otherwise qualified individuals to secure grade E-4 (Corporal) non-career field promotions on which have hitherto depended the reenlistment rights of men with dependents initially acquired after 1 May 1949. This clarification on reenlistment criteria for men in this category does not change the existing restrictions on enlistment from civilian life for individuals with any dependents. Individuals with any dependents at all, whenever acquired, must be entitled to grade E-4 to enlist from civilian life. Individuals now in service in the category concerned must therefore accomplish their reenlistment immediately on discharge without reentering civilian life in order to take advantage of this clarification of the reenlistment rules.

Specifically the new directive (WCL 42633) consolidates prior directives on the suspension of non-career field promotions. It announces the imposition of the new suspension of promotion to grade E-4 effective 29 March 1949. This delay has been made in order to ease the administrative problems in the field of handling these promotions moving through channels for approval at the date of the new regulation.

The new directive also announces that eligibility for grade E-4 (Corporal) career examinations will be based upon a minimum of 9 months' time in grade instead of the 6 months' time in grade formerly in effect. It also directs that eligibility for career promotions to grade E-4 (Corporal) without regard for local position vacancies following career field examinations will be based on 15 months' time in grade or 34 months' total service instead of 12 months' time in grade or 30 months' total service hitherto prescribed.

The new directive also changes the time in grade and time in service promotion requirements to grade E-3 will become effective 29 March 1950:

- For promotion against local position vacancies—9 months' time in grade, instead of 6 months' time in grade hitherto prescribed.
- For promotion without regard to local position vacancies—15 months' time in grade or 20 months' total service, instead of the 12 months' time in grade or 16 months' total service hitherto prescribed.

The directive also announces that in the event that the suspension on grade E-4 non-career field promotions without examination should be lifted, the following new time in grade or time in service requirements are provided:

- For promotions against local position vacancies—9 months' time in grade, instead of 6 months' time in grade hitherto prescribed.
- For promotions without regard to local position vacancies—15 months' time in grade or 34 months' total service, instead of 12 months' time in grade or 30 months' total service hitherto prescribed.

The directive exempts from the suspension on non-career field promotions to grades E-4, E-5, E-6, and E-7 these special promotions:

- Posthumous appointments.
- Medal of Honor promotions.
- One grade promotions upon completion of 29 years of service.
- Promotion of Officer Candidates to grade E-4 under changes to AR 350-350 now being published which establish E-4 as the grade to which Officer Candidates will be promoted instead of the previous E-5.
- Grade adjustments in special or meritorious cases upon application by the commander concerned through channels to The Adjutant General.

These changes in time in grade and/or time in service promotion requirement will not affect any promotions hereafter made based upon prior Infantry, Artillery, Armored Cavalry, or Food Service Career Field examinations, nor any one time grade adjustment promotions in the Combat Construction Ladder of the Military Engineering and Construction Career Field already authorized by SR 650-205-1.

New Army Career Field

The Army this week announced implementation of the Military Police Career field—ninth career field to be introduced in the Career Guidance Program.

The Military Police Career Field will be described officially in SR 650-125-1 now being published.

The field will have three job progression leaders: Disciplinary Guard, Criminal Investigation and Military Police. There will also be a Prisoner of War Processing Ladder covering jobs in the upper three grades intended for mobilization use only and published therefore in a "standby" status.

The Army announcement said that July is the deadline for changes in individual records, classifications into the career field and reporting of actual and authorized strength in terms of the new career field.

Budget Report and the Navy

Following are excerpts from the House Appropriations Committee report pertaining to the Navy budget for fiscal year 1951. The Navy estimates were $4,008,739,000 in cash and $475,496,000 in contract authority; the Committee recommended $3,972,685,000 and the requested amount for contract authority.

Military Personnel

"The budget request for 'Military personnel, Navy,' for $1,153,804,000 is composed of funds as follows:

Pay and allowances	$ 966,675,000
Subsistence in kind	86,792,000
Travel, permanent change of station	24,171,000
Individual clothing and uniform gratuities	29,170,000
Other individual military personnel costs	46,996,000

Total

$1,153,804,000
The subappropriation title 'Pay and allowances' provides funds for basic pay, basic allowances for subsistence and quarters, incentive pay for hazardous duty, special pay (sea and foreign duty, physicians and dentists, and salvage diving), foreign station per diem, personnel money allowance for flag officers, special allowances, battle efficiency awards, saved pay, and similar items as authorized by law for personnel on active duty. The committee recommends no reductions in this subitem, realizing that any reduction would require a reduction in the military strength of the Navy. The committee feels, however, that if the military strength does not reach the strength as justified before the committee that funds not used should revert to the Treasury."

Aircraft and Facilities

"The budget request for 'Aircraft and facilities' for $536,796,000 is to provide funds for Navy and Marine Corps flight operations, both Regular and Reserve, including land-based naval aviation, air transport essential for naval operations, all air weapons and air techniques, naval air stations, and other field facilities."

No reduction is recommended in the budget request but because of the elimination of the language proposed for the general provisions it is found necessary to add to the request here an amount of $570,000, making the over-all appropriation for 'Aircraft and facilities' $537,366,000.

Ships and Facilities

The request of the budget for 'Ships and facilities' for $417,927,000 is to provide for the maintenance and operation of naval vessels of the active and inactive fleets (including floating drydocks and service craft). It also provides for that portion of the shore establishment under the management control of the Bureau of Ships (principally naval shipyards) devoted to the support of the fleet, and for a number of other supporting services. The committee recommends a reduction of $3,304,000 in the appropriation, but because of the elimination of the language proposed for the 'General provisions,' it is found necessary to include in this appropriation an amount of $377,000. Thus the appropriation recommended for this item totals $415,000,000."

Ordnance and Facilities

The request contained in the budget for 'Ordnance and facilities' of $180,777,000 is to provide for the research and development, design, procurement, storage, maintenance, and supply of naval ordnance equipment, supplies, and ammunition, and for ordnance support of the Naval Reserve. The committee recommends a reduction of $5,777,000, leaving a balance for appropriation of $175,000,000."

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS

Island Governments

"The budget request for an appropriation of $1,785,000 for island governments together with anticipated revenues from local taxes, will provide for the expenses of maintaining the governments of American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands during fiscal year 1951. In contrast to prior years, no funds are included herein for the government of Guam as that government is to pass from the jurisdiction of the Department of the Navy to the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior on 1 July, this year, in accordance with Presidential directive. It is expected that this appropriation request will be the last such request submitted by the Navy as Samoa and the Trust Territory are scheduled to follow Guam to the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior of 1 July 1951."

Naval Ship Construction

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee, this week introduced legislation to authorize the appropriation of $500,000,000 for construction of 50,000 tons of "modern naval vessels" and for conversion of 200,000 tons of existing naval vessels.

The bill, H.R. 7764, would provide for the construction of 30,000 tons of combatant vessels; 10,000 tons for auxiliary vessels, and 10,000 tons for experimental types.

The conversions would be made for 125,000 tons of combatant vessels and 75,000 tons of auxiliary vessels.

The bill stipulated that "sums heretofore or hereafter appropriated or made available for the commencement of construction or conversion of vessels, machinery, armament and equipment shall be held and considered to be available for either the construction, the conversion or the equipment of vessels."

The budget for fiscal year 1951 asks $300,000,000 for shipbuilding and conversion. No new contract authorizations for shipbuilding are contained in this budget, the funds being sufficient only to continue existing programs. Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, USN, Chief of Operations, said in this regard: "Although the demands of other programs are so urgent as to sharply restrict funds for new construction and conversion at this time, there are certain types definitely and urgently needed as reinforcements or prototypes for rounding out the operating forces and continuing the development of naval warfare."

Admiral Sherman indicated during recent budget hearings that authority to request committee approval of the construction of these new types will be requested in the near future, but added that the new program would not be initiated until fiscal year 1952.

Chairman Vinson's bill would speed up this ship construction program, which Admiral Sherman has stated must be resumed in fiscal year 1952.

Scholarship Offered

A four-year scholarship is being offered to the son of an officer, warrant officer, petty officer or noncommissioned officer on the active list or retired list of the Navy or Marine Corps, or the son of deceased personnel in the above categories.

The scholarship, proffered by the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N. Y., consists of free tuition amounting to $600 a year. The first student selected will enter the institute next Fall.

USMC Depot and Housing

The House Armed Services Committee this week approved amendments to pending Department of Defense public works legislation to give authorization for construction of a $25,000,000 Marine Corps Depot in southeastern United States and to provide $2,475,000 for construction of 150 family housing units at Quantico, Va.

The public works bill, as submitted by the Department of Defense, contained not a single item for the Marine Corps.

The amendments were drafted at the specific request of Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee. Previously, in enacting a public works bill, the Senate voted down an amendment to give authorization for the Depot, described by Marine Corps officials as "the No. 1 priority."

If the House should vote approval of the depot, it is expected that its fate will be decided at a meeting of Congressional conferees.

It must be noted, however, that Chairman Vinson's amendments merely give authorization for this Marine Corps construction. Actual funds must be obtained in separate legislation.

Marine Reunion

The Annual Sixth Marine Division officers' dinner will be held at Waller Hall, Quantico, Va., 31 March, with 70 former officers of the wartime unit expected to be present. Keynote for the evening will be an address by the Time correspondent Robert Sherrod, who accompanied the unit during the Okinawa campaign.

In addition to former division commander, Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., other military dignitaries expected include Rear Adm. D. S. Knowlton, USNR, formerly division surgeon; Col. Robert B. Luckey who commanded the fifteenth Marine artillery regiment, and is now Director of the Marine Corps Institute in Washington, D. C., and two former chaplains of the division known as the "Twins of the 22nd"—Rev. George Creitz (Easton, Pa.) and Father Eugene Kelly (Manville, N. J.). The division's former American Red Cross Field Director, Harry Danner, of Indianapolis, Ind., will also be on hand for the festivities.

Marine War Memorial

A Memorial Recreation Building, to be dedicated to Marines trained at Cherry Point, N. C., who gave their lives in World War II, is now under construction at the Marine Corps Air Station there.

Construction, begun on 12 Oct. 1949, is expected to be completed by 1 May. The building will be dedicated generally to the Third Marine Air Wing and more specifically to the many units of the wing which were committed to action.

The building will provide facilities for a dance pavilion and recreation lounge to enlisted men and their dependents. It will cover an area of 131 by 87 feet, and will be of a one-story brick and masonry construction.

Marines See Phib Landings

All officers and non-commissioned officers of the 2d Marine Division at Camp Lejeune, N. C., recently received a firsthand report on the Army's amphibious and airborne landings during Operation Portrex.

Division observers, including Maj. Gen. Franklin A. Hart, commanding general, and 29 other officers, watched the operations for a period of several days. On returning to Camp Lejeune they presented a report to the rest of the division officers and NCO's.

One observation made by the group, according to the 2d Division newspaper, was that "tactical air support was not utilized to the extent that our Division might have done."

The observers also reported that the Aggressor forces "had cut down all coconut trees in the groves behind Red and Blue Beaches and had bulldozed away the familiar Marine Monument on the hill behind the airport."

Advertisers in the Army and Navy Journal support the Armed Forces and are familiar with their requirements.

Change Naval Districts

Navy Secretary Matthews has issued a directive which will alter the jurisdiction of ten Naval Districts to coincide with boundaries of Army and Air Force areas.

The order transfers the State of Ohio from the Ninth Naval District, with headquarters at Great Lakes, Ill., to the Fourth Naval District, with headquarters at Philadelphia.

The State of Kentucky, now part of the Ninth Naval District, is transferred to the Fifth Naval District, with headquarters at Norfolk.

The Navy said that although boundaries of the various districts and areas will be the same under the realignment, three Army and Air Force areas will include more than one Naval District.

Naval Districts affected by the order will be made to coincide with the boundaries of six areas of the other two services. The lower part of New Jersey will still remain in the Fourth Naval District and the upper part in the Third Naval District, with headquarters at New York City.

As a result of the Naval district boundary changes, the various Army and Air Force areas and Naval districts will line up as follows:

Marine Reserve Districts

Marine Commandant General Clifton B. Bates has ordered an adjustment of Marine Corps Reserve District boundaries as a result of the Secretary's directive. Districts affected most by the order are the 4th, 5th and 9th.

Boundaries of the 4th Marine Corps Reserve District will be extended on 1 April to include the state of Ohio, and boundaries of the 5th District will be extended to include the state of Kentucky. The order stated that the present boundaries of the 9th District will be modified accordingly.

As a result of the boundary-change, all Volunteer Marine Corps Reserve personnel living in the states of Ohio and Kentucky will be transferred to the 4th and 5th Districts, respectively.

Budget Report and USAF

The following excerpts pertaining to the Air Force budget for fiscal year 1951 are taken from the House Appropriations Committee report, made public this week:

President's Estimates

"The estimate of funds required to perform the missions and necessary programs of the Air Force presented to the committee in the President's budget is for $4,624,577,000 cash, plus $610,289,000 contract authority. Of the cash requested $1,525,000,000 is for payment of obligations incurred under authority heretofore granted to enter into contracts. The program to be supported with these funds provide for the operation and maintenance of 48 air groups and 13 separate air squadrons; 416,000 military personnel; 150,777 civilian employees; for the operation of 235 installations, including air bases, depots, and industrial plants; the procurement of 1,383 aircraft; and the maintenance of the Air National Guard and Air Reserves at approximately the same strength as achieved during the current fiscal year.

"Percentage-wise the distribution of funds provided in the fiscal year 1951 estimates is as follows: 37.4 percent will be utilized for the procurement of aircraft and related services and other major procurement in connection with the modernization of the Air Force; 23.5 percent will be needed for the maintenance and operation of Air Force bases, and their utilization for the training of military forces; 26.3 percent will be required for pay and transportation of military personnel, their subsistence, clothing and equipment; 4.6 percent will be devoted to the direct support of research and development; 4.3 percent for the direct support of the civilian components; 0.6 percent for contingencies of the Air Force; and 1.3 percent for administrative costs at the seat of government and headquarters of major commands."

Air Force Reserves

"The budget request of $73,235,000 for the 'Air Force Reserves' is recommended by the committee for the continuation of the program for training which provides in general for a continuation of the 1950 program. Drill pay is provided for an aggregate strength of 68,627 as compared with 67,512 planned during 1950. Active duty training of 15 days duration is provided for 49,361 officers and airmen. Provision is also made for the attendance of 1,950 officers and 1,800 airmen at service schools for periods ranging from 30 to 90 days."

Reserve Officers' Training Corps

"The Department of the Air Force is requesting and the committee has approved for the ROTC program for 1951 the sum of $10,600,000, as compared with an appropriation for 1950 of $11,677,000. The Air Force training program provides academic work for 53,000 students at 136 institutions. It is anticipated that the program will produce 5,797 graduates for commission in the Air Force of the United States during the fiscal year 1951. It is also contemplated that approximately 14,500 students will attend summer training camps. The 1951 estimate includes funds for the complete cost of the 6-week summer camp training course which extends into the following fiscal year."

U. S. AIR FORCE

AF Electronics Lab

The controversial move of the Air Force's Watson Laboratories from Eatontown, N. J., to Griffis AFB at Rome, N. Y., this week gained the majority approval of a special House Armed Services subcommittee.

However, a dissenting report was made by Representative Harry L. Towe (R-N.J.). Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House committee, following receipt of the two reports this week, directed that both be transmitted to Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington for consideration.

The Air Force's response was to be communicated to the Committee for action at a session on 24 March. It appeared certain that the Air Force would reaffirm its support of the move.

The Air Force has estimated that it will cost approximately $500,000 to move personnel and equipment from New Jersey to the New York site, but contends that efficiency and economy will be served by the transfer. It was stated that the Griffis AFB location would be the center for electronics research.

Included in a public works bill under consideration by the Armed Services Committee is an item for $3,114,500 at Griffis AFB. The hearings this week indicated, however, that the Committee may cut this amount to about $650,000.

Returns to Fourth AF

Brig. Gen. Joseph H. Davidson, USAF, who has been acting as Commanding General of the Fourteenth Air Force, Robins AFB, Ga., has returned to California where he will resume his regular duties as Vice-Commander of the Fourth Air Force at Hamilton AFB.

For the past two months, General Davidson has served in the capacity of Commanding General of the Fourteenth Air Force, during the absence of Maj. Gen. Ralph F. Stearley, USAF, who has been on temporary duty in connection with the Joint Armed Forces maneuvers in the Caribbean.

Flight Service Center

Lt. Col. Charles W. Bagstad, recently graduated from the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va., has assumed command of the Flight Service Center at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. Flight Service is an integral part of the Military Air Transport Service, aiding in the safe completion of all military aircraft on cross-country flights.

CONAC Units Moved

A fighter wing headquarters and two fighter squadrons of the Continental Air Command will be transferred in the near future to the northwest area of the United States. This transfer is designed to make the best use of available fighter squadrons in the organization of a modern air defense front across the Pacific northwest approaches.

Other units to be transferred in the redeployment of ConAC forces will be a fighter-all weather wing headquarters and one squadron, a troop carrier group headquarters, two troop carrier squadrons, and an air depot wing.

The 81st Fighter-Interceptor Wing Headquarters and two squadrons of the Wing now located at Kirtland AFB, N. Mex., will move to Moses Lake AFB, Wash. One squadron of the 81st Wing will remain at Kirtland AFB. The Wing is equipped with North American F-86 "Sabre" aircraft. Approximately 1,200 military personnel will be included in the transfer.

In addition to strengthening the northwest defenses this move will aid in alleviating the housing shortage at Kirtland AFB and allow more room for expansion of the recently activated Special Weapons Command at that base.

The 325th Fighter-All Weather Wing and two of its three squadrons equipped with North American F-82 "Twin Mustang" aircraft are now located at Moses Lake AFB. The third squadron of this Wing is presently stationed at McChord AFB, Wash. The Wing Headquarters and one squadron will move from Moses Lake AFB to McChord AFB. The three squadrons of this wing are scheduled to receive Lockheed F-94 radar-equipped fighters this summer.

The 62d Troop Carrier Group with three squadrons equipped with Douglas C-54 "Skymaster" aircraft is now located at McChord AFB. The Group Headquarters and two squadrons will be moved to Kelly AFB, San Antonio, Tex. Plans call for this group to be equipped with Douglas C-124s late this summer. The third squadron of this group will remain at McChord AFB.

The 25th Air Depot Wing, upon completion of this training at Kelly AFB, will move to Hill AFB, Utah, as previously announced, to make room for the troop carrier units.

DC/S 15th AF

Col. Clifford J. Heflin, formerly commander of the 307th Bomb Group at MacDill AFB, Fla., has assumed new duties as Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations for Fifteenth Air Force at March AFB, Calif. Maj. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell is Fifteenth Air Force Commander.

The former Operations Chief of the Fifteenth Air Force was Col. Wiley D. Ganey, now commander of March AFB.

Commands Air Base

Col. Robert A. Gardner, a 38-year-old graduate of the Citadel in South Carolina and the Air Command and Staff School of the Air University, has been named to succeed Col. William W. Jones as Commander of the 1050th Air Base Wing at Andrews AFB, Washington, D. C.

Colonel Jones received orders naming him Chief of the Allocations Branch of the Aircraft Division in the Office of the D/C/S for Operations at Headquarters USAF in the Pentagon.

Colonel Gardner is a Command Pilot with more than 6,000 hours. He served as Chief of Staff for the 13th Air Force in the Philippines at Clark Field, Luzon, to August 1949, when he became Deputy Commander to Colonel Jones at Andrews.

No Patches on AF Uniforms

The Air Force has issued the following message restricting the wearing of shoulder patches on the new blue uniform. The order is one of a series of recent instructions concerning wearing of the new uniform:

"The following changes with respect to all new AF uniforms worn by personnel on active duty with the regular Air Force are announced: Remove unit insignia formerly worn on both shoulder loops, also the shoulder patch denoting current assignment which was formerly worn on the left shoulder sleeve.

"A shoulder patch denoting service with a unit overseas in a Theater of Operations during World War II is authorized for optional wear at individual expense on the upper left shoulder sleeve. For those who have no wartime overseas service both sleeves will be unadorned."

Warner Robins AMA

trated in the stockage of miscellany of an Air Force. The smallest item is described as "an upper third and fourth navigational jewel for an airman's watch" which costs only 20 mills, and is of such wee dimensions that it can only be placed in a watch with tiny tweezers and the ocular assistance of a magnifying eyepiece. Contrasted with this is the largest, a radar set, which weighs 250 tons, is mounted on eleven trucks, and trailers, and is valued at $300,000. Somewhere between these extremes, actually on the premises at Robins Air Force Base, are 245,273 oddments of aviation.

WRAMA rivals the merchandising empires of Sears, Roebuck and Montgomery Ward, and practices the same procedures which have made them business giants—precise and speedy servicing on order. A teletype or a requisition to WRAMA sets in motion a pattern of processing, location, packaging, and, either by freight or air, the needy consumer in one of the five states of its jurisdiction will have material in hand. For the jobs that cannot be handled on home bases, Robins is set up for major rehabilitations, and any plane, including the B-36, can be accommodated on its runways.

Probably the most inspiring sight to passersby on Georgia State Highway No. 247, which links U.S. Highways 41 and 241, south of Macon, and takes traffic to and from Florida, is the imposing array of giant B-29s, which are parked all around the acreage. These are the famous "pickled" or "mothballed" muscles of an air fleet, sheathed in protective plastic. They could be returned to full belligerent capacity in a matter of hours, should any emergency endanger the nation. More than 200 of these planes nest on the land spread away from the runways.

It is as "landlord" that Robins Air Force Base has taken the greatest recent jump in responsibility.

It came as result of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson's issued directive to effect economies wherever and whenever they could be accomplished, without lessening the ability of the Air Force to perform its missions. Attention in the southeast was focused on Robins and Orlando Air Force Bases. Orlando has been the home of the Headquarters 14th Air Force, which is commanded by Major General Ralph F. Stearley, but the bulk of the elements of the 14th are stationed north and west of the Florida site. Just as Macon is a natural hub for the Warner Robins Air Materiel Area, so it could be for the 14th.

Orlando, in the citrus belt of Florida, was turned back to its famous fruit trees exclusively, and with the scrubbing of Orlando as an Air Force cantonment, expenses of operation were reduced by one base. Also, when it was done, Robins got its newest tenant, the illustrious 14th, which had grown originally from General Claire Chennault's Flying Tigers in China, and is now assigned with the tactical readiness mission for all combat aircraft in the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and Tennessee.

General Stearley, a veteran of the war in Europe as commander of the Ninth Tactical Air Division, is being brought by this move into the neighborhood of a brother campaigner. His Air Force operations in Europe supported the First U.S. Army, commanded by General Courtney S. Hodges, now living in retirement in Perry, Georgia. The 14th became operational at Robins late in October and increased the base population by 170 officers, 131 civilians, and 400 airmen.

Another tenant at Robins, with a workhorse mission, is the 1727th Air Transport Squadron, a part of the international interlocking Military Air Transport Service, and commanded by Major Earle W. Kelly. It has the dual task of air evacuation of medical patients, and general hauling of cargo and passengers. Kelly's unit moves more than 600 evacuation cases monthly, and hauls more than a million pounds of freight each month as well.

An Airways and Air Communications Service Group, the 1814th, a new unit in a service which is third oldest in the Air Force, specializes in communications and air navigational facilities in seven southeastern states, installing and maintaining radio teletype, radio facsimile, ground to air radio ranges, and marker and homing beacons. Under it is the 1926th squadron, which is busied on operational assignments.

A large allocation of effort is made at Robins to chart the weather, weather being a major preoccupation of the Air Force. The 6th Weather Squadron Detachment, 6-26, is concerned with improvements in all-weather flying. Thunderstorms are its specialty, not so much over land masses which are easy to fix, but charting those over large bodies of water which are a major air hazard. The Georgia station at Robins is one of four in existence, all manned by super-skilled radio technicians, and the other three are in Bermuda, Jamaica, and Puerto Rico. They chase the thunderstorms by means of intersection on lightning flashes. Travel in the often agitated elements in the Caribbean has been made safer because of their efforts. The 2104th Air Weather Group, under which is the Base Weather Service, and the 25th Weather Squadron, completes the cross check on atmospheric flying obstacles and snares. The 25th is the stormy petrel outfit, normally prosaically engaged in forecasting, but sometimes violently and adventurously involved in the hurricane tracking of air turbulences from the Atlantic and the Gulf, sending out warnings to military and civilian communities in the paths of these disturbances.

cut, respectively, by 31,000 and 8,000 from current year average strengths. In the active fleet, the Navy will have 653 vessels, 78 less than in the current fiscal year. Navy and Marine aviation programs will operate with 4,389 aircraft plus 1,844 planes for Reserve units, a 21 per cent reduction.

In its consideration of Air Force appropriations, the committee renews, in its report, Congressional attack on the President for withholding funds appropriated for 10 additional air groups. The action by the President, the House document declares, "amounted to an item veto, a power not possessed by the President."

Members of Congress, particularly those in the House, have been insistent that the Constitutional responsibility for Congress "to raise and support armies" is abrogated by the withholding of funds. To this end, Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Armed Services Committee has introduced legislation which would prohibit the Secretary of Defense from withholding more than five per cent of appropriated funds without prior consultation with appropriations committees of the House and Senate.

The moot question remains, however, whether the President's responsibility as Commander-in-Chief can be so restricted.

The House appropriations report declares that the Presidential impounding of funds which would have given the Air Force 58, instead of 48 groups, "circumvented" the will of Congress. "There is no warrant or justification for the thwarting of a major policy of Congress by the impounding of funds. If this principle of thwarting the will of Congress by the impounding of funds should be accepted as correct," the report continued, "then Congress would be totally incapable of carrying out its constitutional mandate of providing for the defense of the Nation."

Specifically at issue, the report reveals, is $157,999,000 in cash and $577,750,000 in contract authority were placed in Reserve at the order of the President.

With regard to the 1951 budget and provisions for a modern Air Force of even 48 groups, the House statement asserts that "at the rate of aircraft procurement in the present bill, instead of having 48 modern groups in 1956, we would have 42 first-line groups."

The report adds: "World conditions do not indicate that such a downward trend is justified and it is the opinion of the committee that a restudy and reevaluation of military strength projected into the future should be made."

Sec. Johnson's Year

a number of military hospitals and curtailing the activities of other medical facilities. Rear Adm. Joel T. Boone, until recently the senior medical officer in the Office of the Secretary of Defense, regarded the Secretary's action in directing the closing of the hospitals as premature and, in consequence, was relieved of his assignment in the Defense Department. The House Armed Services Committee is currently investigating this reduction in medical facilities.

During the heated Navy-Air Force controversy senior Navy officers asserted that Navy morale had greatly deteriorated since the passage of the Unification Act. However, this was refuted by others, who pointed to the high re-enlistment rate as indicative of satisfaction among the enlisted men, and to the recent long-overdue pay increases, which stimulated the morale of all ranks in all the Services.

The new Career Compensation Act, which provides moderate raises for nearly everyone in the Armed Forces, was initiated by the late Defense Secretary James Forrestal. It was Mr. Johnson, however, who vigorously pressed for the passage of the act, and gave it priority on the legislative agenda of the Department.

Mr. Johnson has also urged the Congress to enact legislation to provide decent housing at or near military posts for Service families. Lack of adequate quarters both at home and overseas is at present one of the most serious deficiencies. Some progress toward relieving the situation has been made, but the need is still great.

SATURDAY, 25 MARCH 1950

"In this air atomic age we must build that type of air defense and air striking power which will serve as a deterrent to any aggressor."—GENERAL HOYT S. VANDENBERG, USAF, CHIEF OF STAFF.

OUR PRIORITY LIST

1. Early construction of adequate Government quarters for commissioned and enlisted personnel at all permanent stations, supplemented by satisfactory legislation to encourage private building of dwelling units near Service establishments.
2. Improved retirement pay for wounded and disabled personnel.
3. Continuance and extension of medical and dental care for families of Service personnel; provision for education at Government expense of children of Service personnel on duty at stations where suitable free schools are not available; and survivor benefits for dependents.
4. Restoration of military exemptions from Federal income tax, broadened to exclude all retired pay from taxation.
5. Early attainment and continued maintenance of a fully-manned 70-group Air Force.
6. Prompt construction of a radar fence and air warning net to cover all avenues of hostile air approach.
7. Rapid expansion of our submarine fleet and accelerated development of anti-submarine vessels and equipment, with continued experimentation and construction of new Naval types.
8. Organization and training of a balanced Mobile Ground Force, including air-borne and amphibious troops, of sufficient strength and ready, with complete and modern equipment, for immediate action in an emergency.
9. Development and improvement of the organization and training of the National Guard, Organized Reserves and other civilian components of the Armed Forces, with appropriate training facilities, and restoration of inactive training pay for all elements.
10. Continued scientific research and development in all new and unconventional devices and methods of warfare backed by industry and labor kept constantly ready and trained through production and educational orders.
11. Close supervision and constant restudy of Service promotion and elimination policies and procedures to insure the prevention or prompt correction of injustices and inequities.

CONGRESS should act favorably on the proposal of Chairman Carl Vinson, (D-Ga.), of the House Armed Services Committee, to modernize the United States Fleet. The Congressional leader suggests a five-year construction program, at the relatively moderate total cost of $500 million. Very properly Mr. Vinson emphasizes the urgent need for combatting the submarine menace. New ships and weapons are needed to guard the surface fleet against undersea assassins. The historic importance of control of the seas has not been diminished by modern developments, it has merely been complicated. New types of ships and weapons must be under constant development. Large airships are required for the detection and destruction of the latest elusive submarines. New and experimental types of vessels should be built for anti-submarine duty. Carrier-borne planes, with the dual mission of destroying subsurface craft, and of guarding against hostile air attacks, should be procured in increased numbers. The proposal of Mr. Vinson is an important effort to save our Navy from obsolescence. It merits the support of the President and the Congress.

IT is imperative that some means be found to promote the development of advanced types of air transport planes, despite the refusal of the Bureau of the Budget to approve the Department of Defense's proposal to sponsor prototypes. The Department had worked out a plan for the construction and testing of two types, one best suitable for military but adaptable to civil needs and the other designed for civilian air transport but capable of conversion to military use. This modest thirty million dollar program was vetoed by the Budget Bureau. In addition to the peace time importance of a strong and healthy air line industry and the maintenance of the manufacturing facilities to support it, these activities are vital adjuncts to the National Security. It is in the public interest that ground, sea, and air transportation be kept efficient and capable of rapid emergency expansion. Fortunately, Mr. Delos W. Rentzel, Administrator of Civil Aeronautics, is concerned in the dual peace-and-war role of the air transport facilities and is working on plans to push the development of these needed prototypes. His efforts should get the support of the Bureau of the Budget and Congress.

IN the untimely death of General Muir S. Fairchild the Air Force suffers severe loss and the country is deprived of a brilliant and devoted military leader. The career of General Fairchild is an outstanding example of the opportunity in the Armed Forces for an individual of character and ability to rise from the lowest to the highest post. General Fairchild's career began 34 years ago as an enlisted man in the Washington National Guard. Through personal achievement he rose to a position of great responsibility and distinction as Vice Chief of Staff of the Air Force, with the rank of full general. He won his wings as a flying cadet and then was a pioneer bombing pilot in action over Germany in World War I. Between wars he served as a test pilot and later won the Distinguished Flying Cross for participation in the notable Pan-American Good Will Flight. He quickly acquired an enviable reputation as an officer of rare professional skill, sound judgment, and keen foresight. During World War II he was Air representative on the tremendously important three-man Joint Strategic Survey Committee of the Combined Chiefs of Staff. This top-level trio advised on military strategy and its relation to national policy. Much of the strategy that proved so successful was conceived by this committee. General Fairchild was modest and unassuming, but nonetheless was an officer of great force and exceptional executive capacity. He was greatly admired by all who were privileged to serve with him. His contributions to American air power were great, and his leadership and ability will long be missed.

Letters to the Editor

Letters expressing individual views and intended for publication should be accompanied by the name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as evidence of good faith. If the writer desires to omit his name when the letter is published, he should so state. The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL may find it necessary to use only extracts from longer letters so that more viewpoints may be represented.

Permanent M. Sgts.

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

We who have served continuously on a commissioned status since right after Pearl Harbor and have had no opportunity without needless sacrifice to make our temporary Master Sergeant permanent as have thousands of others who requested separations shortly after cessation of hostilities and later re-enlisted as permanent Master Sergeants under extremely liberal regulations. Most of these never previously advanced further than temporary Buck Sergeants in enlisted ranks. Nevertheless, it seems they have filled the positions that were once set aside for us.

DA Circular 91, 1948, suspends temporary promotions of enlisted men and makes permanent all temporary grades held by enlisted men at this time. Thus, if we had restrained our ambition and held onto that temporary Master Sergeant, the above DA Circular would have made it permanent, or if we had requested separation several years ago for the purpose of re-enlisting as Master Sergeant and then requested immediate recall to active duty, we would have a permanent grade of E-7 as well as commission status and would be eligible for category extensions.

I sincerely feel that the temporary non-commissioned officer grades held by Reserve Officers prior to their entry on continuous commissioned status should have been made permanent by DA Circular 91, as were the temporary NCO grades held by enlisted men at the time, and that these officers should be permitted to remain on active duty as long as their services are desired. To do otherwise would constitute an undeserved penalty for serving on a higher level at the time enlisted temporary grades were being made permanent.

Certainly nothing less should be done than give us a chance to make application now for a permanent enlisted grade equal to our temporary enlisted grade. Approval of such application should constitute a guarantee of re-enlisting in the approved grade upon separation from a commissioned status.

"Army Reserve Officer"

Enlisted "Freeze"

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I see from your 18 Feb. issue that, as usual, our Army does not learn from past mistakes—this time regarding the freeze of enlisted promotions.

It seems I recall something of a similar stunt the Army pulled in 1919 when they gave out "red apples" high, wide and handsome; and lo and behold, danged if they don't up and do the same thing in 1946—which is precisely what put enlisted promotions in its present muddled condition.

Naturally, the usual cry of "no funds" comes up as the alibi for a condition that could just as well have been foreseen and prevented; but no, this so-called "Career" business had to be publicized until everybody was blue in the face either telling the story or listening to it; with the sad results we see today. Third Grader.

One Year Ago

Recently promoted, Lt. Gen. Edward H. Brooks, Director of the Personnel and Administration Division, Army General Staff, was sworn in to that position at a ceremony 18 March in the office of General Omar N. Bradley, Army Chief of Staff.

A number of changes of duty will take place in the Office Chief of Coast Artillery Corps on 1 April when Maj. Gen. Archibald H. Sunderland, Chief of Coast Artillery, ends his tour of duty and goes on leave preparatory to retirement after more than 44 years of service. Succeeding him as Chief of Coast Artillery Corps will be Col. Joseph A. Green, now executive officer, who will be promoted to major general on 1 April.

25 Years Ago

Cooperation with ground troops and aerial observation of artillery fire is being greatly stressed in the training program for Air Service troops stationed at Crissy Field. This is but one of the many similar exercises devised by Maj. D. C. Emmons, commanding Crissy Field, for cooperation of the Air Service with ground troops.

50 Years Ago

The Navy has recently been conducting experiments at Indian Head Proving Station with an invention designed to do away with the necessity of the electric search light on board of ships of war. The invention is a shell which can be fired from an eight or four-inch gun, and which explodes upon striking the water and liberates a gas, which in burning illuminates the sea for a considerable area. The one weak point so far discovered in the shell is that its walls are not of sufficient strength to withstand the shock of the explosion necessary to project it for a distance of over a mile.

85 Years Ago

Sherman, Scofield and Sheridan seem to be the three S's of the hour. Sheridan's raid, if it accomplish the object it started for, will be the most directly useful cavalry raid of the war. He left Winchester on the 27th ult., with two full divisions and a brigade of cavalry, no infantry, and only four light pieces of artillery. His plan contemplated too much rapidity for foot soldiers or for guns.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Marine Commandant on JCS—The House Armed Services Committee has yet to schedule hearings on legislation introduced by Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) to make the Commandant of the Marine Corps a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The bill is a direct offshoot of the Committee's provocative report on "Unification and Strategy," printed at length in the 4 March issue of THE JOURNAL. Included among the 33 conclusions reported by the Committee was the proposal to add the Marine Commandant to the JCS.

Speculation has arisen as to how far Chairman Vinson's proposal will gain the support of the Navy Department. There is some thought that the Navy may welcome Marine Corps support in JCS deliberations. On the other hand, there is some belief in Congress that the Navy may not relish the equal status thus given the Marine Commandant with the Chief of Naval Operations on the JCS.

What may well result from the legislative process is a compromise whereby the Marine Corps would be given substantial representation on the Joint Staff. Although the Marine Corps at the present time has a representation on the Joint Staff equivalent to 20 per cent of Navy membership, this representation could be improved by placing Marine Corps officers in higher posts, particularly with regard to strategic planning. Marine Corps participation in strategic planning phases of the Joint Staff operations has been limited.

It has also been suggested that arrangements be made to assure the presence of the Commandant of the Marine Corps at all meetings of the Joint Chiefs at which matters directly affecting the Marine Corps or its primary missions are under consideration. In this regard, there is some feeling that the Marine Corps should be responsible for the formulation and presentation of amphibious warfare matters on behalf of the entire Naval establishment to the JCS.

Navy Admirals Selection—Should the legislation (S. 2335) amending the procedure for providing statutory vacancies in the flag rank of the Navy—it has already received Senate Armed Services Committee approval—be approved by the Senate, it is anticipated that new data may be made available to the House Armed Services Committee for consideration.

Following the story in last week's issue, which reported the Senate committee's action, THE JOURNAL has received information that the proposal to substitute selection for the present "plucking" process does not have unanimous support from Navy officers, particularly Unrestricted Line Flag officers.

It is stated that not less than one-quarter and not more than one-half of the active Unrestricted Line Flag officers of the Navy with more than 35 years commissioned service and five years' service as Flag officers (all officers senior to class of 1916) would be compulsorily placed on the retired list within six months of the passage of the act. Officers who would attain the age of 62 prior to 30 June 1950, or 30 June 1951, are exempt from elimination depending on whether the act is placed in effect before or after 1 July 1950. Currently there are 11 rear admirals holding temporary advanced rank in this group and 25 serving in their permanent rear admiral grade. Present plans, based on the presentation made to the Senate Committee, indicate the Bureau of Personnel plans that only 50% of this group of 36 officers will be designated for retention on the active list.

Following the initial elimination, the Class of 1916 would be considered for retention in December of 1950. Currently there are 14 Unrestricted Line Flag officers in 1916 of which seven hold advanced rank. It is comparatively easy say concerned officers, to forecast which 50% would get the axe when only 50% of this group of 14 officers are designated for retention.

It is contended also that each December a similar "slaughter" would take place. "It seems particularly shortsighted for the Navy which, since the end of World War II, has already plucked 50 Flag officers and 400 captains to actively seek legislation to separate such a large percentage (50%) of its war experienced senior officers and to base its future personnel policy on the regular forced elimination within five years of their promotion to rear admiral of such a large percentage (25% to 50%) of its rear admirals and at an average age of only 55," THE JOURNAL has told.

Since, currently, active consideration is being given within the Office of the Secretary of Defense to an Officer Personnel Act that will apply equally to all the military services—it would seem wiser for the Bureau of Personnel to seek legislation to temporarily suspend those provisions of the Naval Officer Personnel Act of 1947 for which the President has indicated a dislike (plucking lists) and await the enactment of a three Service Personnel Act.

The reason advanced by the Bureau for these drastic provisions is that the number of retirements of Flag officers for age has been low these last two years and will continue to be so for the foreseeable future. The reason for this condition is that the officers who would have been in the age group to retire during the period 1948-1955 were plucked just after the War. The legislation now sought by the Bureau compounds this unbalance and is a broad step backwards from a balancing of the Flag list, opponents declare.

General McNarney for No. 2 Air Post?—There was speculation among military officials this week as to who will be named to succeed the late General Muir S. Fairchild, the Air Force's noted Vice Chief of Staff who died suddenly on 17 March. In view of the recent House Armed Services Committee report on "Unification and Strategy" which strongly criticized the presence of a military man as Chairman of the Department of Defense Management Committee, there was some talk that General Joseph T. McNarney, USAF, who holds this post, may be given the No. 2 Air Force assignment. As a direct result of the House committee report, Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) has introduced legislation which specifically calls for the removal of a military officer from the Management Committee chairmanship. In the face of this expression by the key Congressional group, concerned over the safeguarding of the principle of civilian control, it is possible that General McNarney will be removed from his present duty before final action on Chairman Vinson's bill.

With regard to his being named Vice Chief of Staff for the Air Force, there is talk also that the Secretary of Defense with whom General McNarney worked very closely when Mr. Johnson was Assistant Secretary of War, will want to retain his expert counsel directly within the Department of Defense. It is said that Mr. Johnson therefore would not encourage consideration of General McNarney as a successor to General Fairchild. In the implementation of unification economies, General

McNarney has been "indispensable" to Secretary Johnson, observers relate. On the other hand, Secretary Johnson himself has stated that the major economies already have been effected and this could make possible General McNarney's reassignment.

Army Reorganization Bill—A House Armed Services subcommittee under chairmanship of Representative Paul Kilday (D-Tex.) this week held another executive session on the Army Reorganization Bill. Presumably, the measure will be submitted to the full committee for action late this month or early in April. Although no official confirmation is available, it is believed that the subcommittee will recommend that the power of the Secretary of the Army be curtailed somewhat from the broad authority which would be given him under provisions of the plan advocated in lengthy testimony by Secretary Gordon Gray and General J. Lawton Collins, USA, Chief of Staff.

Navy Officer Personnel Review—A House Armed Services subcommittee late this week had not yet set a date for resumption of its hearings on a Senate-passed bill which would authorize the review of records of Naval officers passed over for promotion during the war and their advancement in cases where injustices are demonstrated. When the House hearings were recessed last month, the subcommittee had expressed its intention to summon Under Secretary of the Navy Dan Kimball to explain "inconsistencies" with regard to action on recommendations of the Board for the Correction of Naval Officer Records.

Previous meetings of the subcommittee have been featured by long and detailed testimony of Comdr. Edward W. Rawlins, described in a Senate Armed Services Committee report as deserving of advancement to the rank of captain. In view of the explicit documentation which has developed at these hearings and the likelihood of at least one more lengthy session, some committee members have felt that other legislation, described as having a higher priority, should be considered first. The consensus appears to be that the general review and promotion authorization bill passed by the Senate may clear the subcommittee. It is not believed likely that a private bill for the relief of Commander Rawlins, amended by the Senate to provide for the general review, will gain approval for action on the floor of the House.

Leave Threatened—In the current pressure for economy, there is danger that the rights to accumulated annual leave may be threatened. Already the Senate has voted to require the 5,000 employees in the office of the Housing Expediter to use their annual leave as they become entitled to it, or else to forfeit it. Members of the House Appropriations Committee also are discussing the idea and Budget Director Pace seems to have given the idea his OK in principle, although he would rather see it done by administrative action.

If the practice of not permitting annual leave to accumulate should become widespread in the civilian departments, it doubtless would be considered for the Armed Services. In the latter instance, the application of such an idea would be most unjust. Every Service man and woman knows that it is not always practicable, in the interest of the National Defense, to take leave the year it becomes due. Hence, to deny any accumulation of leave would, in fact, be denying many service personnel their earned leave for a number of years in their career. As it is, Service personnel are permitted to accumulate only two years' leave—60 days. The result of even this restriction is that much leave is lost to many service people. These factors must be taken into consideration if Congress should discuss leave-on-a-current basis for the Services.

Discrimination Against Retired Officers—Military witnesses have described as discriminatory a provision in the fiscal year 1951 Appropriations Act which would forbid payment of retired pay to any officer on the Retired lists of the Regular Services who is engaged in selling, contracting, or negotiating for the sale of war materials or supplies to any Department of Defense agency. Previous statutes have stipulated that retired officers can do business only with the Service from which retired, but the new provision broadens this to include all Services. Although Regular officers of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps would be so restricted by the new amendment, it was pointed out that this does not apply to members of the Coast Guard nor to civil service officials.

Maj. Gen. W. H. Arnold, Chief, Budget Division, Office of the Army Comptroller, protesting inclusion of the restrictive amendment, said: "If the object is to prohibit the persons who wear a uniform and who have taken the Service as a career from gaining any useful employment whatsoever, it has achieved its purpose. However, if the object is to protect the Government, it would appear to be that it should be all-inclusive and not restricted to one particular segment of the population. My civilian deputy," General Arnold related, "who is a member of the civil service, can retire and take any employment he so desires, yet I firmly believe that he is in a position to influence sales if he so desires. Again, on this same proposition," said General Arnold, who was supported by Rear Adm. Herbert G. Hopwood, Director of Budget and Reports for the Navy, "criminal law covers malfeasance in office, or the improper utilization of the position occupied."

Despite the opposition of Department witnesses, who were joined by representatives of the Retired Officers Association in arguing against the increased limitation on retired officers, the House Appropriations Committee, in reporting the single-package appropriations bill for fiscal year 1951, put the following provision in the measure: "Sec. 626. No payment shall be made from appropriations in this chapter to any officer on the retired lists of the Regular Army, Regular Navy, Regular Marine Corps or Regular Air Force, who for himself or for others, is engaged in the selling of, or contracting for the sale of, or negotiating for the sale, to any agency of the Department of Defense, any war materials or supplies."

Sixty Years for Father-Son—Master Sgt. Theodore A. Sevenhuysen, jr., will soon be the second member of his family to complete thirty years with the Marine Corps. He is a trumpet player with the Marine Band, an organization in which his father T. A. Sevenhuysen of Washington, D. C., now 85, also served.

The two Marines never served together at any time, and played together with the Band on only one occasion. Both have many memories of colorful events in which they participated. Among other important affairs, the younger Sevenhuysen played with the Band for the King and Queen of England in 1939, and his father played for President McKinley twenty minutes before he was assassinated in Buffalo, N. Y. in 1901.

Sergeant Sevenhuysen, who also plays the violin with the Marine Symphony Orchestra, has completed 29 years with the Band and plans to spend his last year with the Reserve in Florida, where he will move "immediately" upon retirement.

Foreign Affairs—Four B-29 bombers transferred to Great Britain under the Mutual Assistance Program of the Atlantic Pact nations were flown to England this week by American crews. Members of the crews will remain in England on temporary duty to assist in training British personnel in the operation and maintenance of the planes.

These bombers, taken from the inactive reserve of the Air Force, are the first of about 75 planes of this type which will be transferred from the United States to the Royal Air Force. Under arrangements made pursuant to the North Atlantic Security Treaty manufacturing facilities in England will be devoted largely to the production of fast jet fighters, while the United States will produce most of the medium and heavy bombers required by the Alliance.

At a brief ceremony at Andrews Field, Md., just prior to the take-off of the four planes on the trans-Atlantic flight, Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson said that the B-29s would soon be followed by a growing volume of military equipment for the eight North Atlantic countries sharing in the aid program. Large amounts of excess weapons and equipment are now being prepared for overseas shipment.

The French aircraft carrier Dixmude has sailed from Norfolk, Va., with 43 planes transferred from the U. S. Navy to France. The carrier will go to Bizerte, in Tunisia, and thus avoid the threatened demonstrations of French Communist dock workers, who oppose the Military Aid Program on the ground that it is directed against Russia. The Navy has announced that two American destroyers will soon be transferred to The Netherlands under the program.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee this week voted to cut authorization of funds for the Economic Co-operation Administration by a billion dollars, and to substitute an equivalent amount of surplus food from stocks purchased in connection with the farm price support program. However, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted to authorize the full $2.95 billion requested, and, in addition, $150 million left over from current appropriations for this purpose.

After some delay the Soviet press has launched a bitter attack on Secretary of State Dean Acheson for his speech at the University of California at Berkeley last week, in which he outlined some steps that Russia might take to promote peace. These included acceleration of negotiations for peace treaties with Germany, Austria and Japan; greater co-operation with the members of the United Nations, especially with reference to arrangements for international control of atomic energy; withdrawal of Soviet troops and police from satellite countries, and a cessation of Russian-controlled Communist propaganda in other nations. The Russian newspapers denounced the Berkeley address, and made it clear that the suggestions of Mr. Acheson were flatly rejected.

In an address in Washington this week Secretary-General Trygve Lie of the United Nations urged free negotiations among the powers for a 20-year program for the firm establishment of peace. Mr. Lie offered no details of such a plan, but said that recent affirmations by the United States and the Soviet Union, concerning the peaceful co-existence of different economic and political systems, inspired hope that a program of this character could succeed.

International tensions in Europe and the addresses of Mr. Acheson and Mr. Lie were among the matters discussed this week at a closed meeting of top American diplomats in Rome. Among those attending the meeting were George W. Perkins, Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs; Alan G. Kirk, Ambassador to Russia; Lewis W. Douglas, Ambassador to Great Britain; James C. Dunn, Ambassador to Italy; David K. E. Bruce, Ambassador to France; John J. McCloy, High Commissioner to Germany; and W. Averill Harriman, European Chief of the Economic Co-operation Administration.

An effort to evacuate 400 Americans and 1,200 nationals of other countries from Shanghai failed this week when the Red government of China refused to permit two American shallow-draft tank landing ships to ferry the passengers to an American liner lying off that port. Because of nationalist mines in the outer harbor the General W. H. Gordon of the American President Line was unable to reach the port, so two LSTs were sent from Japan to pick up the refugees and transfer them to the passenger vessel. Because of their shallow draft the use of these ships would lessen the possibility of striking a mine. However, the arbitrary refusal of the Reds to agree to this arrangement leaves the evacuees stranded in Shanghai.

In a surprise commando raid a nationalist force from Formosa landed on the Chinese mainland, 200 miles south of Shanghai, and captured a town from the Reds, holding it for several days. Some 2,500 Communist troops are reported to have been slain during the fighting.

Navy Men to NACA—A Navy flag officer and three former Naval officers were appointed to membership on the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics this week. President Truman announced the selection of Vice Adm. John H. Cassady, USN, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Air), to succeed Vice Adm. John D. Price, USN; Mr. Thomas W. S. Davis, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, to succeed Mr. John Allison; and Mr. William Webster, Chairman of the Research and Development Board, to replace Dr. Karl T. Compton.

Mr. Davis was associated with United Air Lines for six years, most recently as a Special Assistant to the President. During the war, as a Naval officer he was assigned as Administrative Assistant to the Director, Naval Vessels and Aircraft Division. Mr. Webster, Executive Vice President of the New England Electric System from 1942 until appointment to the RDB, is a graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, Class of 1920, and served in the Construction Corps of the Navy until 1928.

Planning Against Atom Bomb—"Adequate disaster planning procedures could have eliminated 25 per cent of the deaths from the atomic bomb in Hiroshima and Nagasaki," Maj. Gerald M. McDonnell, Army Medical Corps, told members of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation, affiliated with the National Education Association 23 March at Atlantic City, N. J. "While we hope such a disaster will never occur in the United States, we are duty bound to plan for such an emergency, since only by planning can we minimize the tremendous loss of life that can result from an atomic disaster," Major McDonnell of the Special Projects Division, Army Surgeon General's Office, said.

Pointing out that elaborate schemes and plans, involving underground shelters, dispersal of existing construction, and similar steps have been offered, the Army doctor advised that such plans are prohibitive in their cost and the time involved. The most practical defense measure, he suggested, is an adequate disaster plan, including organization of medical personnel and materials, and dispersed stockpiling of items which are essential in the control of any disaster. Among the latter items, he listed whole blood, blood substitutes, bandage and wound dressing materials, fluids for parenteral use, and antibiotics.

Adm. Denfeld Deplores Carrier Loss—In the second of his series of three articles in Collier's, Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, USN-Ret., former Chief of Naval Operations, goes into the cancellation of the carrier USS United States. The article, titled "The Only Carrier the Air Force Ever Sunk," concludes with a recommendation that the National Security Act be amended to require Congressional approval for any administrative cutbacks in appropriated funds. "The Air Force saw, or imagined it saw," Admiral Denfeld writes, "the danger that the Navy would encroach on its prime function. Accordingly, our brother fliers and their zealous lay supporters went to work to 'sink' the USS United States. Incidentally, so far as I have been able to find out, that is the only carrier the Air Force ever sank, anywhere."

"Until 1949," says the former CNO, "neither General Omar N. Bradley nor General Hoyt S. Vandenberg had ever been aboard an aircraft carrier at sea. Yet these men, and others just as ignorant of the Navy's vital role, have taken it upon themselves to decree how naval warfare shall be fought in the future." Admiral Denfeld said that Admiral William D. Leahy, USN-Ret., who served as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, had a "broad viewpoint" of service matters, but General Bradley as chairman "tries to be fair, but he remains an Army officer with a one-service background and viewpoint."

As to the proposal that the Marine Corps should be represented on the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the former Navy chief says, "To my mind, there is no reason why a Marine should not sit there now. If he is not actually made a member, the Commandant should at least be present as consultant when questions of interest to the Marines are discussed. And the Marines should have representation on the war planning committees."

P-X Profits Aid Morale—Congressional testimony made public this week reveals that profits from post exchanges and ship service stores totalling approximately $30,000,000 will be diverted to welfare of enlisted men during the forthcoming fiscal year.

Expenses of Commissaries—The Armed Services have contended before a House Appropriations subcommittee that new restrictions on operations of commissaries should be deleted from Appropriations Act legislation. In testimony made public this week, Service spokesmen declared that if prices are increased by such factors as pay of personnel, spoilage, all utilities, equipment, transportation and expendable supplies, prices will increase about seven per cent. They said that if reimbursement for rent for building space is added, the increase will go to 10 to 12 per cent. Additionally, it was pointed out that in foreign and remote areas, where the need for commissaries is greater, still higher increases may be anticipated.

Maj. Gen. W. H. Arnold, Chief, Budget Division, Office of the Army Comptroller, testified that commissary benefits were considered by the Hook Commission and by Congress in setting the new military pay rates. The proposed restrictions on commissary operations, General Arnold held, "would break faith with the man who enlisted in reliance upon this privilege and would deal a serious blow at morale, especially to those on foreign service."

Dependent Schooling—A report in a current Army publication reveals that the dependents' education program, under direction of The Adjutant General, is providing schooling for 14,301 children in the United States, 974 in territories and possessions and 13,832 in overseas areas. The Army operates 62 schools for dependents in Germany, five in Austria and 55 in the Far East.

Maj. Richard L. Richardson, author of the article, is Officer in Charge, Dependents School Program, Operations Branch, AGO.

Identification of Aircraft—The Civil Aeronautics Administration is urging private fliers to file flight plans before embarking on trips over certain areas of importance to the air defense network. Mr. Delos W. Rentzel, CAA Administrator, told Washington members of the Aviation Writers Association this week that the move does not presage control of private flying, but is merely to aid the military in identification of aircraft operating in critical areas. While the filing of such flight plans is in the "request" stage now, it will later, probably in May or June, be given the force of regulation. The requirement will extend only to aircraft planning to fly 20 miles or more out to sea in the area from Norfolk north to the Canadian border and 20 miles either side of the entire Canadian border. Also craft flying more than 4,000 feet over any of the four atomic installations areas will be required to file flight plans. (There is a complete prohibition already in effect against flights over certain atomic areas). These requirements will be considered critical until 1953, he said.

Crommelin Eyes Senate—Capt. John G. Crommelin, USN, indicated this week that he may enter the Senatorial race in his home state of Alabama. The veteran aviator who was ordered furloughed to a half-pay status last week said that he had received "numerous telephone calls and telegrams" urging him to run against Alabama's senior senator, Lister Hill. He added, "If I thought I could be of service I would run. I thought I could be of more service to my country in the Navy. But if I'm not going to be in the Navy, then I feel I could be of more service in Congress."

In order to file for the Senate seat, Captain Crommelin would have to run as an independent, since 1 March was the deadline for qualifying for Senate primary in Alabama. Captain Crommelin will be placed in an indefinite furlough status next week as a result of recent activities which the Navy termed "a campaign of criticism."

Celebrated Cavalry Unit—Three former commanders of the First Cavalry Division are expected to participate in ceremonies to be held at Fort Bliss, Tex., today, 25 March, unveiling and dedicating a memorial plaque to the famous Cavalry organization. The trio will include Maj. Gen. Innis P. Swift (Ret.), who commanded the Division at Fort Bliss and led it out of the United States during World War II; Maj. Gen. Verne D. Mudge (Ret.), who led the Division out of Australia and into Manila; and Maj. Gen. William C. Chase, now chief of staff for the Third Army, who led the Division from April 1945 into Tokyo, and commanded it as late as 1949.

Key Medical Post—Col. Stuart G. Smith, MC, who has been assistant chief, Supply Division, Office of the Army Surgeon General, has been named chief of that division effective 22 March. Colonel Smith replaces Brig. Gen. Silas B. Hays, MC, who is being reassigned as Surgeon, U. S. Army, Pacific, with headquarters at Fort Shafter, Hawaii. Lt. Col. John J. Pelosi, MC, will fill the vacancy created by Colonel Smith's reassignment.

THE Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Mrs. Omar N. Bradley held a reception at their quarters at Ft. Myer Wednesday in honor of the representatives of the member nations of the North Atlantic Treaty organization and their wives. There were some eighty or more guests, many of whom will meet again at the Hague in the Netherlands. Cooney, at which also were the Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. W. Beukema, USA, son-in-law of General and Mrs. Bradley is also out of town on maneuvers in the south, flying back to near-by Parkfairfax, in Virginia, for week-ends when possible, to be with his wife and two youngsters.

Rear Adm. and Mrs. Carl Holden will come to Washington from New York for the Navy Relief Ball on 14 April, and have a full schedule ahead of them, beginning with a dinner party to be given the night of the ball by Vice Admiral and Mrs. George W. Roper. Vice Adm. and Mrs. Arthur D. Struble will entertain them at dinner the next night and Rear Adm. and Mrs. H. B. Jarrett are to be hosts at brunch, which will be followed by Capt. and Mrs. Neil K. McNair, honoring the wives whose husbands head the Administrative, Special and Technical staffs of the Department of the Army. In addition, among those honored were Mrs. Gordon Gray, wife of the Secretary of the Army, and Mrs. Archibald S. Alexander and Mrs. Karl R. Bendetsen, wives of the two Assistant Secretaries of the Army.

Steel Profits Up

Net profits of the United States Steel Company for 1949 were $165,908,829, the largest since the boom year of 1929. The total compares with $129,527,845, the net for 1948. Despite the huge profit the cash disbursements for the year exceeded receipts by $44.1 million, the annual report of the company disclosed.

Products and services sold by the company in 1949 totaled $2,301,685,689, compared with $2,481,508,535 for the previous year. Funded debt fell to $65.9 million at the end of 1949, the lowest point in the company's history.

Despite the availability of $86.6 million reinvested income after costs and dividends, $44.1 million more was paid out than received. Chairman of the Board Irving S. Olds said this excess was met by the sale of $29.1 in Government securities and by the use of $15 million in cash on hand. A main factor in the excess outlay was $93.1 million in cash needed for increased inventories and for property additions and replacements above amounts allowed for depreciation.

Obituaries

General Muir S. Fairchild, USAF

General Muir S. Fairchild, USAF, Air Force Vice Chief of Staff, died suddenly 17 March at his quarters, Ft. Myer, Va. Funeral services were held 21 March at the Ft. Myer Chapel with interment in Arlington National Cemetery, close by the gravesite of the late General of the Air Force H. H. Arnold.

From the U. S. Submarine Base at Key West, Fla., President Truman addressed a message of condolence to Mrs. Fairchild. "In General Fairchild's sudden and untimely death," said the President, "the Department of Defense, particularly the Air Force, has lost a leading exponent. He was recognized by colleagues and associates as an able administrator whose technical knowledge and wide experience enabled him to make an outstanding contribution to the councils of the Pentagon. I am thinking of you in your great sorrow and offer this assurance of deepest sympathy."

Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington said:

"The death of General Fairchild comes as a terrible shock. The nation and the Air Force have lost an outstanding leader and alumnus. The thousands who were privileged to know him personally have lost a true friend. His vision, brilliant analytical ability, and gentle patience will long be remembered and missed. His magnificent contributions to the planning and operation of the Air Force of today will never be forgotten."

"To Mrs. Fairchild and her daughter go my deepest sympathy. The country has lost a great American."

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF, Chief of Staff stated:

"The nation and the Air Force have lost an outstanding leader in the death of General Fairchild. I have lost one of my dearest friends."

"As Vice Chief of Staff General Fairchild has been a tower of strength to the many in the Air Force who have come to know and love him. His contributions to the nation and the Air Force through his friendly tolerance and brilliant understanding will never be fully realized. As a staff officer, as a commander, as a friend, he gave his all to the Air Force and the nation."

"I extend my sincerest sympathy to Mrs. Fairchild and her daughter upon the passing of a great alumnus."

At Fort Myer Chapel simple services were conducted by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Palmer P. Pierce, member of the staff of the Chief of Air Force Chaplains, also conducted the services at the gravesite.

Brig. Gen. S. D. Grubbs, USAF, Commanding General Headquarters Command, USAF, was Escort Commander of the funeral procession. Col. Henry J. Amen, USAF, Commanding Officer, Bolling AFB, was designated Parade Marshal.

In a farewell aerial tribute to General Fairchild, 52 F-80 "Shooting Star" jet fighter planes of the 56th Fighter Group from Selfridge AFB, Mich., led by Lt. Col. Francis S. Gabreski, USAF, flew over Arlington National Cemetery. Leading three squadrons of 16 planes each were four aircraft in a "vee" formation with the second file blank. This is symbolic of the loss of a flyer.

General Fairchild was born at Bellingham, Wash., 2 Sept. 1894.

He served as a sergeant with the Washington National Guard from 19 June to 5 Oct. 1916, and the following June became a flying cadet. After attending ground school at Berkeley, Calif., he went to Europe to attend various flying schools in France and Italy, and on 11 Jan. 1918 was appointed a second lieutenant in the Aviation Section of the Signal Reserve. From that date until 8 March 1918 he flew several types of large bombers and piloted night bombers over the Rhine with the French forces, and from March through Oct. 1918 was on detached service with the French Army.

In Dec. 1918 he returned to the United States for duty as a flying instructor at Ellington Field, Tex., and the following October was honorably discharged from the Army.

On 1 July 1920 he received a Regular Army commission as a first lieutenant of Air Service and two months later was appointed commanding officer of the 11th Aero Squadron at Kelly Field, Tex.

He became a test pilot at McCook Field, Ohio, in Feb. 1921 and was graduated from the Air Service Engineer School at McCook Field in 1923, after which he was named chief of the Engines and Planes Maintenance Branch at that station. In June 1925 he went to Mitchel Field, New York, as engineer officer, and the following May became post engineer officer at Langley Field, Va.

Meanwhile, between 21 Dec. 1926 and 2 May 1927 he participated in the Pan American Good Will Flight, for which he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross. This decoration of the 10 officers who participated in the flight was the first award of the newly-authorized Distinguished Flying Cross.

Following the flight, he resumed his duties at Langley Field until June 1928 when he enrolled in the Air Corps Engineer School at Wright Field, Ohio. Following graduation a year later he became Air Corps representative at the Douglas Aircraft Company at Santa Monica, Calif.

He entered the Air Corps Tactical School at Maxwell Field, Ala., in Aug. 1934 and, following graduation in June 1935 enrolled in the Army Industrial College at Washington, D. C., from which he was graduated in June 1936. A year later he was graduated from the Army War College at Washington, D. C., and assigned as an instructor at the Air Corps Tactical School, where he was appointed director of the Department of Air Tactics and Strategy in July 1939.

He was assigned to the Office of the Chief of Air Corps a year later as assistant executive in the Plans Division. In June 1941 he became the first secretary of the newly-formed Air Staff, and two months later was promoted to brigadier general and named Assistant Chief of Air Corps. In March 1942 he became Director of Military Requirements at Air Force headquarters in Washington.

General Fairchild was appointed to the three-member Joint Strategic Survey Committee in the Office of the Combined Chiefs of Staff in Nov. 1942 along with Lt. Gen. S. D. Embick, USA, and Vice Adm. Russell Willson, USN. This committee was charged with advising the Joint Chiefs of Staff on general and military strategy and the relation of military strategy to national policy and included advice on combined military strategy in the light of current developments

U. S. COAST GUARD

THE projected Coast Guard Reserve training appeared doomed for at least another year this week as the House Appropriations Committee disapproved a budget estimate of $4,100,000 to inaugurate the program. Authorization for the Coast Guard Reserve program has been on the statute books since 1941, but this year Congress, as it did last year, doubtless will now deny funds for its implementation.

The committee cut operating expenses for the Coast Guard in Fiscal Year 1951 by $2,850,000 to a new total of $135,000,000, but said the recommended amount will provide at least as many personnel as during the current fiscal year. During 1950, the Coast Guard will have an average of 23,513 officers and men, of whom 2020 will be commissioned officers and 749 warrant officers.

For acquisition, construction and improvements, the House committee cut the Coast Guard budget to $15,000,000, a reduction of $13,979,000 in the amount requested. The cutback will prohibit the Coast Guard from expanding its aviation activities.

The overall effect of the Committee action on the Coast Guard budget will reduce the Coast Guard budget from the $186,504,000 which the President requested to $165,575,000, which is $19,891,000 over the 1950 appropriation of $145,684,000, but which represents a cut from original estimates for fiscal year 1951 of $20,929,000.
